

Join the 2015 enrolled agent study programme

If you practice in the area of US individual tax you will probably want to represent your clients before the IRS. To do so, if you are not a US CPA or attorney, you need to be an enrolled agent. This involves passing an exam comprising three papers, on individual and business taxation.

Most practitioners outside the United States will be dealing with US expatriate citizens and so the content of the exams can come as something of a surprise, since it was designed with the US-based practitioner in mind and covers significant aspects of US domestic taxation to which the non-US based practitioner is rarely exposed.

The course we offer is the only one of its kind outside the US and combines three days of intensive tuition by Narelle MacKenzie, a US-based CPA, with a choice of six or 12 months' access to specialist online materials developed by Gleim. As well as covering the content of the three exams, the system offers progress tests, practice exams a Gleim "counsellor" and a wealth of other features.

How to book

A number of places have already been reserved so do sign up soon, if you would like to attend. Remember you get access to the Gleim materials as soon as your payment is made, you don't have to wait until the July course.

The live course takes place from 27-29 July 2015 at a dedicated training venue in central London.

As soon as you reserve and pay for your programme, you will be sent access details for the Gleim materials. It is advisable to do this ahead of attending the training course, so you have some familiarity with the content.

A hard copy of the course materials and the associated Gleim books will be provided at the start of the training course.

Call +44 (0)1962 458058 or email deborah@djhinternationaltax.com to discuss or book your place.

Pricing for 3-day course plus 12 months' access to Gleim: £1650 plus VAT at 20%

Pricing for 3-day course plus six months' access to Gleim: £1500 plus VAT at 20%

If you sign up for six months' access and need to extend it, provided the sessions run concurrently you may do so for an additional fee of £250, plus VAT.

Online materials are updated in the Spring of each year. If your period of access crosses the update, you will be provided with the new materials at no extra charge. The hard copy of materials is not updated, however.

Pricing above includes full course documentation and access to the materials online. Breakfast, lunch and refreshments throughout the three days of the course is also included.
